

MANDATORY FOR GERMANY'S FORMER COLONIES REFUSED BY THE PEACE CONFERENCE

Reasons Are Set Forth in Lengthy Note, Completed, Paris Dispatch.

ALLIED REPLY NOT READY

Little Hope That It Will Be in Final Shape Before End of the Week; Chancellor Remer Sends Note Complying of Hard Terms to Austrians.

PARIS, June 11.—The reply to the German counter-proposals, agreed upon by the peace conference heads, refuses the request for a mandate for the former German colonies. It was learned today. A lengthy memorandum explains the reasons and sets forth the operations of the League of Nations.

The reparations portion of the reply, which has been completed and has reached the printers, does not fix the total sum which the Germans must pay. The text of the treaty itself is not changed but the reparations assurances to Germany regarding the method of the reparations process, explaining that it is a workable arrangement.

President Wilson fought to include a fixed sum in the reparations clause and close of the discussion leaves him unchanged in the belief that is the best plan.

It is understood that the President said that inasmuch as Premier Clemenceau had insisted to the contrary and also that he had signed the original draft, he would sign the reply as formulated.

PARIS, Tuesday, June 10.—Apparently there is little hope that the Allied reply to the German counter-proposals will be ready before the end of the present week. When completed it will consist of a short reply in general terms covering all the German proposals. Then will follow answers prepared by various commissions showing the reasons why the Allies cannot grant specific requests.

PARIS, Tuesday, June 10.—Karl Remer, Austrian chancellor, the head of the Austrian peace mission, has sent a letter to the peace conference complaining of the "hard conditions" imposed upon his country which he says, is "overwhelmed with despair," and pointing out the complexity of the Austrian frontier question. The letter will be laid before the council of four tomorrow.

OPERATORS AT POSTS, CLAIM OF THE WIRE HEADS

Few Over Call for Nation-wide Strike, Called for This Morning; Connellsville Unaffected.

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 11.—Only 166 persons, including 121 operators out of a total of 40,000 employed by the Western Union throughout the country were absent from duty at noon today, Newcomb Carlton, the president of the company stated, terming a complete failure the strike called by the telegraphers' union.

The divisional report, which covered all the large centers in the Western Union service, declared that the wires were clear and traffic normal. Mr. Carlton said. He was without advice, he added, from the smaller offices.

"We are handling business throughout the country without serious interruption anywhere," Mr. Carlton said. "We have an adequate force to carry on all our business without interruption."

O'CONNORS ASK $20,000 DAMAGES FOR SON'S DEATH

Action Growing Out of Train-Auto Crash on West Side Filed in Court.

NEGLIGENCE IS ALLEGED

Crew of Pennsylvania Train Fails to Observe Proper Precautions Approaching Crossing, With Result That Peter J. O'Connor Is Killed.

Alleging negligence on the part of the crew of a Pennsylvania special train which was in collision March 13 with an automobile on the Crawford avenue crossing on the West Side in which Peter J. O'Connor was fatally injured, the young man's parents, Frank and Mary O'Connor, today filed an action in court in Uniontown claiming $20,000 damages. The suit is directed against Walker D. Hines, federal director general of railroads, as operator of the Pennsylvania.

Conferees between representatives of the Railroad Administration and members of the family had failed to bring about a compromise of the claim, it is understood.

The statement filed in court sets forth that the crew of the train, aboard which were General Superintendent R. T. Morrow of the Pittsburgh division of the Pennsylvania and other officials, failed to give any signal, either by bell or whistle, in approaching the crossing and that the train was moving at excessive speed.

In the death of their son, which occurred shortly after the accident, at the Cottage State hospital, it is averred the plaintiffs are deprived of a large sum of money annually, this representing his income.

FORMER SENATOR JOHN C. SPOONER CALLED BY DEATH

Served 16 Years in Congress and Then Retired, in 1907, a Poor Man; 76 Years Old.

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 11.—John C. Spooner, former United States senator from Wisconsin, died at his home here early today after an illness of several weeks. He suffered a relapse Monday after having partially recovered from a nervous breakdown. Mr. Spooner was 76 years old and because of his age his family entertained fears for his life when he was first stricken.

Sixteen years a United States Senator from Wisconsin, each one of which in the words of President Roosevelt, was "a direct financial loss" which he could ill afford. John C. Spooner relinquished the position with which the legislators of his state had thrice honored him and retired in 1907, two years before his completed term, to re-enter the private practice of law and acquire a competence for his family and himself in his declining years.

Regarded as one of the ablest constitutional lawyers, a brilliant debater and one of the greatest authorities on international law in the upper house of Congress, Senator Spooner, like a few of his famous colleagues—namely, Roscoe Conkling, John G. Carlisle, Thomas Brackett Reed and George F. Hoar—left public office a poor man. During the 12 years of his final law practice in New York he was counsel in much important litigation, including the federal government suits against the Trans-Atlantic shipping pool, the Naval Stores and Oregon-California land grant cases.

Born in Lawrenceburg, Ind., January 6, 1843, the son of Judge Philip Spooner, who removed to Madison, Wisconsin, when John was 16 years old, the future senator received his A. B. degree from the University of Wisconsin in 1864 after having served with distinction in the Union army in the Civil War. Young Spooner enlisted as a private in Company A, 40th Wisconsin Infantry, and for gallantry in action was promoted to captain and brevet major in the 50th Wisconsin Infantry shortly after reaching the age of 21.

WOMAN BEST DETECTIVE

So Says Husband Whose Wife Hounds Him Up on Desertion Charge.

A woman is the best detective in the world, so says the husband of Anne Sechler, after attempting to desert her for another woman. On Monday, June 9, Anne Sechler, wife of E. R. Sechler, appeared before Alderman W. D. Colborn to make information against her husband on a charge of desertion. Mrs. Sechler claimed that he had deserted with another woman and if the alderman would hurry it was possible that he could be caught in Pittsburgh.

The alderman did hurry and gave her the warrant. She went to Pittsburgh and turned the warrant over to an officer at that city Monday afternoon. She bade him follow her and immediately began to hunt out "hubby." He was caught boarding a Chicago train with the woman in question, whose name has not been revealed. He was brought to Connellsville yesterday morning by Constable Charles Wilson and given a hearing before Alderman Colborn yesterday afternoon. He was ordered held for court.

"LYNCHING" A SUICIDE

Commoner's Investigation Dismisses the Theory of Crime of Republic.

Following an investigation yesterday by Coroner S. H. Baum of Uniontown into the supposed lynching of Mike Nobotnick of Republic, it was announced that the man had committed suicide by hanging himself from a tree near Republic. The fact that Nobotnick's hat was still on his head when the body was found was taken to disprove any theory of foul play.

SEN. CROW PREVENTS DISAGREEMENT OVER COMPENSATION BILL

Acts as Arbitrator Between the Administration and Other Interests.

BASIS OF CALCULATION

For Ascertaining Rates of Compensation the Question at Issue Between the Contending Forces; the Administration Bills Remain Unamended.

Senator William E. Crow, of Fayette county, played the role of arbitrator between the administration and the manufacturing and labor interests at a hearing upon the workmen's compensation bill at Harrisburg yesterday, says L. R. Goshorn, special correspondent of the Pittsburgh Dispatch. The senator prevented a disagreement between the contending forces. What the senator said at the hearing was not divulged, but his intervention prevented insertion of amendments backed by Joseph R. Grundy, president of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' association, and B. M. Clark, representing the bituminous coal interests. The hearing was held before the Senate Judiciary Special committee. Attorney General Schaffer attended.

The administration bill, drawn by Attorney General Schaffer, provides that "In continuous employment, if immediately prior to the accident the rate of wages was fixed by the day or by hour or by the output of the employee, his weekly wages shall be taken to be five, and one-half times his average earnings at the same rate for a working day and using as a basis of calculation his earnings during so much of the preceding six months as he worked for the same employer."

"Provided, however, that if the employee regularly and habitually worked more than five and one-half days per week, the weekly wage shall be multiplied by his average earnings for a working day by six and one-half or seven, according to the number of working days the employee habitually worked."

The Clark-Grundy proposition provided that the average weekly wage of an employee should be ascertained by dividing his total earnings for so much of the preceding 12 months as he was in the employ of the employer by the number of calendar weeks in such period, deducting, however, from the divisor any full weeks or fractional part thereof during which he was prevented from working by reason of his own sickness, as evidenced by affidavits of attending physicians.

The proposition would count one day's wages as a week's wages if the employee through no fault of his own, was laid off because of a plant suspension or any other similar cause. The attorney general said he opposed any plan that would raise one day's work as a week's wages.

KOOSER AND COLLIER

Vote Against the Prohibition Enforcement Measures in the House.

HARRISBURG, June 11.—The Victorian prohibition enforcement bill, which proposed the creation of a state prohibition commission, and the Fox bill which prescribed the manner in which intoxicants could be dispensed, both failed of passage in the House yesterday. The former had 33 affirmative and 56 negative votes; the latter 34 affirmative and 97 negative votes.

The defeat of these measures, the supporters of them claim, was due to the change of front by 14 members who had voted in favor of ratification of the prohibition amendment, but lined up against the enforcement measures. Representatives Kooser and Collier of Fayette county were two of the members voting against both bills who had previously voted for ratification. Representatives Coldsmith and Whitman of Westmoreland county supported both bills.

Governor Sprout and Republican party leaders take the position that in view of the early passage by Congress of a national enforcement law state legislation for this purpose is unnecessary. For this reason it is understood Governor Sprout will not approve the Ramsay bill, which proposes to fix the alcoholic content of liquors at two and three-quarter per cent, even if it passes both the House and the Senate.

TREATY COPY IN POSSESSION OF HENRY P. DAVISON

Testimony on "Leak" Given in Washington by Davison, Elihu Root; Morgan Did Not See It.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—Elihu Root, former secretary of state, appearing today at his own suggestion before the Senate Foreign Relations committee investigating how copies of the peace treaty got into the hands of persons in New York, testified that for several weeks he had a copy given to him by Henry P. Davison of the Morgan banking house.

Sensor Lodge said the copy he had seen was shown to him by Mr. Root. When Mr. Root was excused Henry P. Davison was called. Mr. Davison said he brought a copy of the treaty to America but that it never had been read by any man except himself and Senator Root.

After Mr. Davison has been questioned for a half hour he was excused and J. F. Morgan took the stand. Mr. Morgan said he had not seen a copy of the treaty.

Frank A. Vanderlip, former president of the National City bank, followed Mr. Morgan on the stand testifying that he had never seen the treaty.

PROMPT RATIFICATION

Of the Suffrage Amendment is Urged in Message of Governor Sprout.

HARRISBURG, June 11.—The certification of the suffrage amendment made to the legislature by Secretary of the Commonwealth Woods, yesterday, was followed by a message from Governor Sprout urging the prompt ratification by both houses.

Governor Sprout is very much interested in having the ratification of the amendment take place as promptly as possible. Although Senator Crow has not made known his position it is understood that he has not refused to assist Governor Sprout in having Pennsylvania among the first of the states to sanction right of women to vote.

It was said that W. D. McGinnis, secretary of the speakers' committee, was in Washington for the purpose of securing speakers of world-wide prominence for the occasion. He is confident that more prominent men than Marshall can be secured, it was stated.

GUILTY, VERDICT IN EVANS CASE; MERCY IS URGED

Woman Denies Having Part in Robbery of West Penn Pool Room Safe.

MEN CONFESS THEIR GUILT

Story of Theft of Over $2,000 in Cash Is Told During Trial of the Woman in the Case, Also Its Recovery; "Swag" Is Counted in Court.

Guilty, with recommendation to the mercy of the court, was the verdict returned in Uniontown this afternoon in the case of Mrs. Elizabeth Evans, who was tried yesterday on a charge of being an accessory to the robbery of the safe of the West Penn pool room, Connellsville, a few weeks ago of over $2,000. The case was given in the jury at 11 o'clock and the verdict was read at the resumption of court at 1:30.

Lou C. Gemas, one of the principals in the case, some time ago pleaded guilty and is under sentence to the penitentiary. The case of E. R. McPoland, the third in the case, has not been disposed of. Both were called as witnesses in the trial of the Evans woman.

The court room where the trial is being held had the appearance of a counting room of a bank when the proceedings of the robbery were offered in evidence. The money was contained in a canvas sack and when counted totaled $2,266. Of that sum $2,036 was in bills and the remainder in small change.

Both Gemas and McPoland sought to place all blame for the robbery upon the other. Gemas absolved the girl while McPoland testified she was in on the job on a three split basis. The young woman herself denied any knowledge of the robbery until the money was unpacked from a grip in her apartment, 6 Scott Place, Pittsburgh, although no denial was made of the fact that she was with the two self-confessed robbers the entire evening in question at Connellsville, occupying the same room in an Italian rooming house.

A glance over the shoulder, a nod at a movie resulted in the acquaintance of McPoland and the woman, both testified. McPoland asserted that shortly after their acquaintance the woman made the statement that she would like to have a husband and knew where she could get it but needed of another fellow. He was a short time later introduced to Gemas, he said, and called suddenly to Connellsville the Saturday afternoon before the robbery. McPoland testified that Mrs. Evans provided care for him to Connellsville. While waiting for a freight, the man testified, he encountered Gemas and Mrs. Evans and that the trio went to an Italian rooming house for the night. At 4:30 o'clock, he said, he and Gemas left to rob the safe, leaving Mrs. Evans in the room. Gemas forced the entrance and robbed the safe, he testified, while he did picket duty outside. The three then returned to Pittsburgh with the money in a grip.

The story told by Gemas varied but little from that related by McPoland as to the actual robbery with the exception that he claimed that McPoland was the director of the affair, with himself assisting. Gemas also testified that he deceived Mrs. Evans in bringing her to Connellsville and absolved her from all responsibility. Gemas said he knew McPoland was in Connellsville that evening and that it was necessary for him to see him about a job.

Testifying in her own behalf, Mrs. Evans said her real name was Elizabeth Evans and that her maiden name was Mildred Chivalier. She gave her age as 23 and the date of her marriage as December 20, 1915. She wore a wedding ring. She testified of having received a "tip" from a bartender at Connellsville, whom she named, that County Detective Smith was after them and passed the tip on to Gemas, who left the vicinity by way of McKeesport, Washington, D. C., and Syracuse, where he was located later upon information furnished by Mrs. Evans.

The bride wore her traveling suit of rose taupe silvertone, a hat of black shadow lace and a corsage of roses. "THREE CHEERS FOR THE BOYS," NEW SONG BY LOCAL COMPOSER.

"Best Patriotic Selection Since War Began" Written by R. Winter Corkran, R. & O. Telegrapher.

"Three Cheers for the Boys" is the title of a new song with a tuneful air and its words suited to the present day, with the soldiers' returning in large numbers from France, written by a Connelville man, R. Winter Corkran, a telegraph operator at the local division offices of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad. It is touted as the best patriotic selection that has appeared since the war was declared and bids fair to become as popular as some of the well known songs that have been sung in Connelville and elsewhere during the past two years.

It is appropriate to the home-coming for the soldier boys.

The words were set to music by E. S. S. Huntington, managing director of the Knickerbocker Harmony Studios, New York, and the song has since been submitted to publishers and phonographic record and music roll manufacturers.

Mr. Huntington is the author of "There is Silver Now Where Once Was Gold," and others.

Mr. Corkran has a new song "Won't You Come Back Amid the Scenes of Childhood," about ready. The writer's home is at 302 Ninth street, East Side.

FOUGHT THE "FLU" IN A BATTLE FOR HER VERY LIFE

Then Nerv-Worth Came to Newcomer Women's Rescue "Like a Miracle."

Mrs. Anna L. Woods is a well known resident of this little town in the coal and coke district near Uniontown. A statement made a few days ago is in the following extraordinary words.

Wade H. Guyton—The second week in last January I was taken down with this "flu" and it was the last of February before I got relief. I got out of bed and sat around the house and was taken down again with double pneumonia. That gave me the battle of my life for two weeks. I was very nervous and weak. My lungs troubled me and rheumatic pains in my arms, shoulders and legs. Stomach and digestion very poor, and I had no appetite.

My husband got a bottle of Nerv-Worth from you and like a miracle I am now feeling fine and gaining strength daily. Appetite and digestion good, no rheumatic pains and am no more nervous. Nerv-Worth proved a life-saver to me, and I will never be without it in my house.

A COURSE TO BE APPROVED.

In authorizing bids to be received for the remodeling of the city hall, so as to make it adaptable for use as a central fire station, the city council has taken a very proper step in the direction of remedying a condition about which there has been much complaint.

With the housing of the fire fighting apparatus at one point remote from the congested section of the city, and with a grade railroad crossing to be negotiated every time an alarm is sent from any part of the East Side, an element of danger has existed which property owners have viewed with no little concern. Thanks to good luck which has left the West Side crossing clear at the time most of the alarms have been sent in, and also to the efficiency of our fire fighters, no heavy loss has occurred in the East Side since the apparatus has been assembled on the opposite side of the river. It is too much to expect, however, that such a condition would prevail at all times. When least expected, a delay at the West Side crossing might occur which would result in very heavy loss.

That property owners have been penalized by the improper location of the central department, and are liable to be more heavily penalized in case the East Side is not provided with more quickly available means of fighting fires, has been more than unfair. The members of council have long realized and deliberated upon these things, and several opposing suggestions have been made to remedy them. But not until Councilman U.S. came forward with his well worked out plan for utilizing much of the waste space in the municipal building, has an agreement been reached as to the best method of solving the problem under present conditions.

The remodeling of the building will cost a considerable sum of money, but less than a separate building suitable for the same purpose, and very much less than a fire might cost if the fire apparatus were delayed a few precious minutes in reaching the scene in time to prevent serious loss and damage. The members of council have given consideration to these conditions and have very wisely decided that the courageous and proper thing to do is to proceed with the plan which best suits the situation. In this conclusion they will find their course to be approved by all thoughtful citizens.

LABORERS WARNING TO THE AGITATORS.

While there has never been any doubt as to how organized labor of America stands upon the issues represented by the ideas and utterances of the radical agitators in the United States and elsewhere, it is especially interesting at this time to note how disapproval of Bolshevist doctrines and practices has been expressed by the largest organization of workers in the world.

At the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, representing more than 3,000,000 American workers and women, now in session at Atlantic City, opportunity came to the delegates to show their lack of sympathy with the efforts of the radicals and disturbers during an address by Governor Rumson of New Jersey. Referring to a meeting held in New York the night before, which expressed sympathy with the Soviet doctrines as practiced in Europe, Governor Rumson asserted that "these men threaten that unless things are settled their way chaos will result."

He paused a moment, the press despatches say, and then declared: "I know that American labor and this convention, fraught as it is with such potential consequences, have no sympathy with any ideas that are not constructive. I know you are out of harmony with destructive creeds. You think along sane lines."

Instead of receiving this sentiment in the silence of disapproval, it is stated that a burst of applause from the floor quickly swelled to a roar. "This is a warning to which the disciples of violence and disorder, who have been attempting to put the name of organized labor to their propaganda, should give instant heed."

If, as City Solicitor Higbee advises, the paving of Davidson avenue and Chestnut street can be financed only by "short term" bonds, the property owners are not likely to object if council makes short work of awarding the contract.

The real big league game is on now, with the Senators at the bat. The interesting hanging at Republic is nearly adding variety to the stirring incidents for which that community is becoming famous.

That Historical Pageant will lack an important personage if Colonel William Crawford is not represented along with other notables of colonial times in this vicinity. The best Pennsylvania can do on ratification of the suffrage amendment is to take fourth place. That will be better than 45th, but it should have been first.

The falling off of over half a million tons in steel orders in May tells the story of the shrinkage in coke production meantime.

Some of our legislators were apparently unwilling to ratify their own vote of ratification.

A real leader ought to have no trouble securing a job as head of the much demoralized administration forces in Congress just now.

The city hall fire station plan appears to have converted some members of council to the belief that two is really not a majority of five.

A Huge Program

WASHINGTON, June 10.—(Special correspondence.)—Not even the great War Congress passed legislation of greater importance than that which will receive the consideration of the 56th Congress, now in session under Republican leadership. Enormous appropriations for the war were made by its predecessor, which, of course, will not be even approached in the coming two years. But, aside from the bills making those appropriations, the real legislation of the last Congress was of a distinctly destructive nature, so far as our time-honored institutions are concerned. Many laws were passed that destroyed in a paragraph the carefully worded statutes that represented the lessons taught by years of experience, and handed over to the executive sole power, almost without limitation, to direct the affairs of the nation as he pleased. It is claimed by some that it was necessary to the efficient prosecution of the war that the President should be clothed with autocratic powers, but, however that may be, the fact remains that during the war our former government by law has given place to a government by men, and it becomes the duty of the Republicans of the new Congress to return to the people the control of national affairs through their representatives at Washington.

The last Congress was essentially one of destruction to our popular form of government. The 56th Congress will be primarily constructive, building up once more that constitutional democracy under which we have prospered for over a hundred years. It is far easier to tear down than it is to build up, and for that reason the preparation and enactment of the laws of this Congress will present much greater difficulties, and call for a far higher degree of creative legislative genius, than was ever exhibited by the Democrats who directed the affairs of the War Congress.

Transportation problems, both by rail and by water, will be the first and most important items of legislation that will claim the attention of Senators and Congressmen. Continued government ownership of the roads is sure to drag them down into still further depths of inefficiency, entailing a drain on the federal treasury amounting to hundreds of millions of dollars a year. Likewise a plan must be worked out for the sale of our government-owned merchant marine to private interests who will operate the ships under some form of limited federal supervision. Both the land and water systems must be brought into coordination with respect to through shipments that will enable our manufacturers to compete successfully with others in foreign markets.

Closely allied with the rail and ship problems is the imperative need, made manifest by the war, of amendments to our anti-trust laws that will enable both systems to establish inter-relationships tending to the more efficient movement of freight.

The working out of a permanent military program for the country is not the least important of the questions that present themselves for solution. The future relation of the Regular Army and National Guard present complications that will demand most thorough investigation and careful legislation.

The impending inundation of the cheap products of foreign labor that will follow closely on the consummation of peace, make it imperative that a suitable protective tariff law take the place of the Democratic free-trade statute that now governs our imports.

The above are but a few of the weighty matters that await settlement at the hands of Republican legislators. Never before in the history of the country has such an important legislative program been presented, and never before has Congress been better prepared to meet it.

The Sand Man is a funny chap. That makes you want to take a nap. An' my Pa says he knows him well. But what he looks like I can't tell. Cox when my Pa says: "Howdy do, An' Mr. Sand Man, how are you?" I rub my eyes a bit an' stare. An' there you are into town, he is. It is a funny thing to me. That I can't see what Pa can see.

Sometimes Pa takes us for a ride. An' I am sitting by his side. An' lookin' at the stars an' things. Which every evening always brings. An' Pa says: "Bud, I guess we'll meet The Sand Man further down the street. Right now he ought to be in sight. He's due about this time o' night. He should be waitin' somewhere near. I thought I'd pick him up right here."

We jog along a block or two. An' then Pa says: "Well, howdy do. Well on, without a word of fuss. We'll hit you into town, he is." An' Pa an' he sit there an' chat. Dismissin' this an' arguin' that. But I can't tell you what he said. For when we wake up I'm in bed. It is a funny thing to me. Why I can't see what Pa can see.

CURRENT WIT and HUMOR

BY NATURE.
"Even if you have been buying oysters and trout and shad from the same man for ten years, you needn't be peeved because he refused to buy tickets from you for a charity show."

No Place for It.
"Didn't you get lonely in the Arctic circle?" asked the garrulous man.
"No," replied the celebrated explorer. "There was always something to occupy my time and attention."
"But didn't you ever feel the need of a little small talk?"
"Never. Small talk is as much out of place in the polar regions as a tractor would be in a drawing room."

A Parious Life.
"Is the editor in?"
"He's somewhere about," said the office boy.
"Tell him a friend wants to see him."
"You live here, don't you?"
"No."
"All right. I'll tell him. He says he ain't got no friends in this town."

Unfortunate Illustration.
Wigg—Do you believe in metempsychosis?
Wags—Come again, please.
Wigg—It's like this. According to that doctrine, my soul after it leaves this shell may inhabit the body of a jackass.
Wags—Well, I don't know any place where it would feel more at home.

Our Language.
"Did you call Edith up this morning?"
"Yes, but she wasn't down."
"But why didn't you call her down?"
"Because she wasn't up."
"Then call her up now and call her down for not being down when you called her up."

Fruit Failure.
"In the bright lexicon of youth there's no such word as 'fail'!"
Mistake! The timid buds in youth have perished in the gala.

Not That Kind.
Client—I want to sue for a divorce and an allowance of $1,500 a year.
Lawyer—What is your husband's income?
Client—It's about that. I wouldn't ask for more than a man makes. I'm not that kind.

Save the Babies.

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twenty-two per cent., or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirty-seven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen!

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save many of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. There can be no danger in the use of Castoria if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher as it contains no opiates or narcotics of any kind.

There is such a thing as saying too much on any subject, and the "grand-stand" talker sooner or later becomes a bore. The truth is always welcomed, and the truth reiterated and confirmed is more than welcome—it reaches your innermost soul.

Fletcher's Castoria is all its advertising has claimed for it. Scrutinized by the microscope of public opinion and used for over thirty years it stands without a peer in the hearts of thoughtful, cautious, discerning Mothers. And once used, mother love—there is no substitute for mother love—will soon try a "substitute" or a "just-as-good".

THE SOISSON.

"THE COMING OF THE LAW."—A William Fox production featuring Tom Mix, is being presented today. The picture is of the sort that has made William Fox famous as a producer of thrilling, entertaining photoplays. It is full of that exciting adventure of the west that everybody loves, and it has romance that is very refreshing. The story deals with a gang of rustlers in Dry Bottom, in New Mexico. Mix, as Kent Hollis, enters the town, where his father long had owned a ranch and a newspaper. His father is dead. He learns that the town is run by rustlers, who have robbed his father of many cattle. He turns in with a win to clean up the town and make it a law abiding place. In this he is aided by Judge Graney and pretty Nelie Hazelton, played by Brownie Vernon. The picture shows a battle between fists and guns, two brawny fists win; desperate battles with outlaw gang among the boulders, a gritty cowgirl, who defies desperadoes, risking death, sensational act of Tom Mix riding a wild steer and many other exciting and interesting features. A selected comedy is also shown. Both productions will be repeated tomorrow.

THE PARAMOUNT.

"BARRING FISTS"—A tale of the real west, quite human of its kind, is today's attraction. There are some excellent scene effects, depicting wide areas of the western country and the dash of cowboys and moving herds of cattle give a constant sense of life and action. The story develops a touch of heart interest at various points and the theme of the mother love form a basis for this Harry Carey, the popular star, appears in the role of Cheyenne Harry, the son of the marshal of Hays City, a border town in which lawless deeds are common. The story of "Bare Fists" opens with a sudden call upon the marshal to put a stop to a saloon row. The father says he is ready to

ACME SOLDIERS RETURN

William Bunderoff and Ernest Brown Come Through Unharmed.

ACME June 11.—William Bunderoff and Ernest Brown arrived here Monday evening from Camp Sherman, where they received their discharge. They were both members of the 320th Infantry. Brown was a member of the supply company.

Both were trained at Camp Lee, Va., at the same time. They sailed to France on the same ship, arriving there May 30, 1918. Quite often they were able to get together while in France and have a chat, which they said, "acted as a wonder in cheering them." Neither of the boys was wounded or gassed.

MEAT PRODUCTION SMASHES RECORD

Twenty Billion Pounds Is Total for United States in 1918.

FARMER WAS BIG FACTOR

Output Never Approached in Magnitude in This or Any Other Country—Striking Increases in Exports Are Shown.

Washington.—American dressed-meat production, including lard, amounted in 1918 to 20,129,000,000 pounds—a quantity never before approached in magnitude by the live stock industry of this or any other country. The corresponding figure for 1917 was 18,317,000,000.

Three-fourths of the enormous increase was in pork and one-fourth was in beef.

The meat surplus in 1918 was so great that extra export demands made little impression on it, although 1918 export shipments of meat and lard nearly doubled the 1917 figure—rising from slightly less than 1,750,000,000 pounds to slightly more than 3,000,000,000 pounds—and these figures do not include shipments to American military forces abroad.

The aggregate 1917 consumption of dressed meat and lard in the United States was approximately 14,500,000,000 pounds. This means, after allowing for increase in population an addition of 23 pounds for every man, woman and child in the country—despite the food conservation campaign, which in 1917 caused consumption to decline considerably.

Farmers Was Big Factor.

"While the people are excited through their abstinence during the immediate crisis, it was the farmer who was the really big factor in the ultimate situation," says the bureau of animal industry, United States department of agriculture. "The producer, of course, was expected to do his part, but he did it with such powerful effect that in a single year the meat shortage was turned into a pronounced surplus. Thus in 1918 there was not only meat enough to supply all foreign demands compatible with the restricted shipping facilities, but a greatly enlarged quantity was available for the home consumption."

Who be sure, it cost the farmer more, much more, to feed his animals and get them to market. Likewise, all other steps from producer to consumer, became more costly, hence the high prices. But the unprecedented prosperity of the people, as a whole, enabled them to afford the increased cost. In fact, laboring people, probably, consumed more meat during the last year than in previous times.

The total number of cattle slaughtered in 1918 is estimated at 15,750,400, as against 13,728,900 in 1917. Their average weights were practically the same for both years, and the beef produced from them was 6,690,000,000 pounds in 1917 and 7,641,000,000 pounds in 1918. This was a remarkable achievement, as it hardly would have been credited that beef growers could increase their production a million pounds in one year.

Results Called Stupendous.

"The hog matures quickly, therefore a much more rapid increase would be looked for than was the case with cattle. Even so, the results for 1918 can be described only as stupendous. The hogs marketed in 1918 numbered 60,854,700, as against 67,483,800 in 1917. Furthermore, the average weight was nine and a half pounds a score hog in 1918. Thus when the animals are turned into pork and lard we have a total production of 11,225,604,000 pounds in 1918, as against 8,478,288,000 pounds in 1917, an increase of 2,747,316,000 pounds, or 32.4 per cent, nearly one-third."

Striking increases in exports also are shown by the bureau. Beef shipments abroad in 1918 were 34 per cent more than in 1917—the chief 1918 items being 141,000,000 pounds of dressed beef, 141,000,000 pounds of canned beef. Exports of pork and lard in 1918 amounted to 2,279,267,000 pounds, which was 71.7 per cent more than the quantity sent abroad in 1917.

The bureau shows that in the aggregate more meat by far is eaten in the United States than in any other country in the world—although some sparsely settled countries raising much meat have a larger per capita consumption. It also says that there is room in the United States for a great expansion in the use of mutton and lamb.

ARMY TRUCKS TO BUILD ROAD

War Department Turns Over to Agricultural Department 20,000 for Use of States.

Washington.—More than 45,000,000 worth of motor trucks have been turned over to the department of agriculture by the war department and are ready to be distributed to the various state highway departments through the bureau of public roads.

The trucks, numbered about twenty thousand, and a majority of them new, are the surplus left on the hands of the war department when the war ended. They are to be distributed to the states under a provision of the post-office appropriation bill and must be used on road construction work.

PADEREWSKI—Premier of Poland AND MASTER PIANIST USES NUXATED IRON

To Obtain Renewed Energy, Power and Endurance

Dr. Kenneth K. MacAlpine, for 16 Years Adjunct Professor of New York Post Graduate Medical School and Hospital, Says That in His Opinion Nuxated Iron Is

The Most Valuable Tonic, Strength and Blood Builder Any Physician Can Prescribe.

Ignace Jan Paderewski, one of the greatest musical geniuses of the age, at a time when his untiring work for Poland overtaxed his strength and impaired his health had recourse to Nuxated Iron to help rebuild his wasted forces and restore his old-time health and strength.

"With the tremendous strain imposed by over two years of almost ceaseless work in the cause of his fatherland, of which he is the foremost figure today, it is easily understood why Paderewski sought the sustaining tonic benefit of Nuxated Iron," says Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital. "Lack of iron in the blood not only makes a man physically and mentally weak, nervous, irritable, easily fatigued, but it utterly robs him of the force that stimulates and strength of will which are so necessary to success and power in every walk of life. Thousands of men and women are impairing their constitutions, laying themselves open to illness and literally losing their grip on health, simply because their blood is thinning out and possibly starting through lack of iron. Iron is absolutely essential to enable your blood to transform the food you eat into muscular tissue and brain matter. Without iron there is no strength, vitality and endurance to combat obstacles or withstand severe strains. It helps make strong sturdy men of blood and iron there is nothing better than organic iron—Nuxated Iron."

Dr. Paderewski says of an iron tonic: "I use very frequently and consider it as an excellent tonic."

SOLD IN THIS CITY BY A. A. CLARKE.

Ignace Jan Paderewski the new Polish Premier who took Nuxated Iron when he was in a weak and nervous condition and needed something to build up strength and energy.

Dr. Kenneth K. MacAlpine says: "If people would only realize that iron is just as indispensable to the blood as is air to the lungs and as just as important as keeping up a sufficient supply of all times, there would in my opinion be far less disease so-called from anemia, weakness, conditions of the blood, the wasted tissues and the help to build renewed energy into the whole system whether the patients be young or old. In my opinion Nuxated Iron is the most valuable tonic, strength and blood-builder any physician can prescribe."

If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary Nuxated Iron three times per day, after meals, for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained.

Nuxated Iron, a refined iron, which is known to be the most powerful and well-known to doctors everywhere. Unlike the older formulas it is not a harsh, irritating substance. It is a pure, clean, and does not have the usual metallic taste. It is a pleasant, palatable, and easy to take.

The Nuxated Iron is a very powerful tonic and should be used in every case where there is a deficiency of iron in the blood.

It is dispensed by all good druggists.

Dr. Paderewski says: "I use very frequently and consider it as an excellent tonic."

OIL PIPE LINE IS A JONAH

Missouri Fish Die by Thousands in Streams, Cattle Go Thirsty, and So On.

St. Louis.—The breakage of an old pipe line in Missouri has caused thousands of fish to die, cattle to go without water, cornfields to be ruined and general consternation in the south central portions of this state along the Missouri river.

The pipe line carries oil from the Oklahoma and Kansas fields to the refineries in Indiana. It seems to have a way of breaking at spots. The result is that the oil seeps the low places, gets into the creeks, smothers the fish and keeps the stock from drinking. When the pipe bursts in a corn field there is havoc.

Farmers try to burn the oil off the streams that stock may drink. This burning often cooks the fish for the fire from oil is fierce. Cattle bluffs have been baked up to a height of 25 feet. In the end burning does little good for the sides of the creek are saturated with oil and the next rise taints the water.

Fish in the Missouri river have been tainted by oil and people who buy fresh fish from those streams complain of the taste.

Hungry Mothers Are Eating Their Children

New York.—Starving refugees in the southern Caucasus are resorting to cannibalism; a number of cases having been reported of mothers killing and eating their children, according to a message received here by the American committee for Armenia and Syrian relief from Dr. J. R. E. Main, commissioner to the Caucasus for the committee. "The southern Caucasus is full of refugees," Doctor Main's message reads. "For example, Erivan, the capital of the so-called Armenian republic, normally had a population of 20,000. At present there are 100,000 persons in the city and vicinity."

"Mothers are killing their children and eating them. Cannibalism, British officers tell me, is becoming quite common."

BASEBALL STORIES

Goetz is an odd name, but there are two of them in the Southern league.

The story that Memphis would let out Joe Slattery seems to have been a mistake.

Art Phelan is one of the Galveston veterans who seems to have come back strong.

Hellman is making the Tiger fans sit up and take notice by his great work at the initial bag.

The Vernon club has turned infielder Tex Westerfall over to Portland, which can use most anything.

Hod Eller, Cincinnati pitcher, is credited with the first no-hit game of the major league season.

Fred Smith, formerly of the St. Paul club, has returned from overseas and expects to play in the association this season.

Fred Toole's return to the New York club will make a vast difference in that team's power as soon as he gets in condition.

At Bloomington, Joe Dunn has a pitcher named Newkirk, who won 18 straight games for Oakland in the Pacific Coast league.

MAYOR SEES NO BARS

"Barred any unforeseen outside interference by the federal government, the Willard-Dempsey boxing match positively will be held in Toledo July 4."

This statement was made by Mayor Cornell Schreiber of Toledo.

"I can see no objection whatever to this boxing exhibition," the mayor said. "It will be a scientific boxing match of limited duration. Each round will be three minutes, followed by one minute of rest."

The United States government, through its encouragement of boxing at army camps and entertainment, has given its absolute endorsement of this form of sport."

TRIP AROUND WORLD

Baseball magnates, headed by Ben Johnson, president of the American league, are planning a trip around the world. It will be started next fall, if conditions warrant, and if not it will be postponed until the fall of 1920. The last trip netted a profit of $23,000.

Coast League

John Henry, former Washington catcher, is not expected to remain with the Boston Braves after Hank Gowdy gets into shape.

The Seattle club let Grover Land go. However Bill Clymer got the idea the old soldier would be his first-string catcher is a mystery.

Hank Severid, who has just returned from army service, probably is the most feared batsman among the catchers of the major leagues.

Dan Howley, aggressive coach of the Tigers, says a pitcher should be kept out of uniform 24 hours before being worked in a championship game.

Allen Russell may become the leading pitcher of the New York Yankees. His recent slab achievement against Boston was a boost for the Yanks.

The Seattle club has shelved Bert Niehoff. After making the trip all the way from New York Niehoff was unable to get going because of his bad ankle.

AMERICA TOOK LEAD IN WAR GAS PRODUCTION

Output at Time of Armistice Ten Times Germany's.

EXCELLED IN GAS MASKS

Protection Twenty Times That of Official Book Tells of Part American Industry Played in Providing
Munitions for the American Army—
Germans Could Have Won War by Paris by Pushing Gas Surprises.

An official narrative of the part American industry played in providing munitions for the American army in the great war is unfolded in a book being prepared under the direction of Assistant Secretary Crowell of the war department, who was director of munitions up to the close of hostilities, when he was specially assigned by the president to direct the demobilization of material.

Advance pages of two sections of the book, those dealing with the chemical warfare material, offensive and defensive, and with the equipment for the signal corps, were made available, telling for the first time officially and completely not only of the stupendous scope of the projects, but of the difficulties and delays encountered and of the patriotic support of the war program given by American business generally.

The chemical warfare section tells of the original work done by the ordnance department toward obtaining toxic gases and anti-gas devices for the use of American troops. Subsequently this service became a separate branch of the army, under the direction of Maj. Gen. W. L. Sibert.

Among other secrets disclosed is the basis of frequent statements that at the time of the signing of the armistice the United States alone was producing gases for military use at a rate ten times in excess of the best production Germany could obtain. The Germans produced, with all their facilities, about six tons of mustard gas per day while the United States was producing more than 60 tons a day, and employing methods of production far more modern and efficient than anything attained by the enemy.

There were three plants at work on mustard gas, the Edgewood, Md., arsenal, which was manufacturing 30 tons a day by November 11 and had turned out 711 tons up to that day; the plant at Hastings, N. Y., which was to have a capacity of 50 tons a day and was ready to operate on November 11, and the 50-ton plant at the National Aniline and Chemical company at Buffalo, N. Y., which was 80 per cent complete. The chemical name of this compound is dichloroethyl sulphide and its popular name of mustard gas comes from its odor.

Production of Tear Gases.

Another element of the program was the production of tear gases, not deadly under ordinary circumstances, but designed to produce blindness, thus forcing the troops to use masks extensively, impairing their military efficiency. The foundation of these gases was bromine, the main supply of which is obtained from sea brines in a subsidiary plant chiefly in the vicinity of Midland, Mich., where the government financed the sinking of seventeen brine wells under direction of the Dow Chemical company, which were prepared to supply 650,000 tons a year.

The other chief gases are the so-called "killers," the gases so deadly as to bring death unless safeguards are provided, chlorine and chloroform and phosgene. The only one of these produced commercially in the United States was chlorine, and even with that the supply was utterly inadequate to the demand.

A statistical table shows that 1,488 tons of chlorine in liquid form, 1,000 tons of chlorine gas, 420 tons of phosgene, and 180 tons of mustard gas were actually shipped overseas from January to November, 1918. In addition 800,000 75-millimeter shells loaded with chlorine and 150,000 shells loaded with mustard oil went abroad; the shipments including 224,000 phosphorus grenades as smoke bombs, and 18,000 phosgene bombs for Livens mortars. The capacity for filling shells and bombs on the day of the armistice exceeded 4,500,000 a month. At that time the practice of shipping gases abroad in bulk to be loaded into projectiles on the other side had been abandoned.

"We therefore shipped in Europe in bulk," the report states, "3,682 tons of gas or its equivalent. This was largely loaded into shells and used by the United States troops or those of the Allies. This quantity was sufficient to load 1,000,000 shells, two-thirds of them being of the 75-mm. calibre and the other one-third 105-mm., the total number being thought to be at least equal to the total number of gas shells fired by American troops in action. Thus, while American gas was not actually fired in American shell against the Germans, American gas was used against the enemy and America furnished at least as much gas as she fired.

"In addition to this we shipped 18,000 Livens drums loaded with phosgene. These contained 270 tons of gas, and some of them were fired at the enemy."

A table of casualties at the Edgewood arsenal shows that while only four men lost their lives from gas at this plant, 325 were injured, the bulk of them, 674, in mustard gas accidents. Taking up the defensive side of gas warfare material, the report shows that the American troops had "the best and most protective gas masks the world had seen," and "they brought these with them by the millions." A total of 4,500,000 masks was produced, of which 4,000,000 were sent overseas, and the report states that these masks "gave twenty times the protection afforded by the best German gas mask."

"No American soldier was ever gassed due to the failure of an American gas mask," the report says, "and such gas casualties as did occur were due to the fact that the masks were not quickly enough utilized when the gas was thrown over, or because the soldier was unaware of the presence of gas."

Germany's Great Gas Blunder.
The original order from the department was for 25,000 masks to go with Pershing's first expedition, and the report tells in detail of the frantic efforts necessary to procure them, efforts which actually counted for little, since the masks were not used for many months. At the time the expedition sailed, however, the British and French were not thoroughly acquainted with the gas warfare that was developing, nor had complete effective protection been worked out. In speaking of the first German gas attack upon Canadian troops at Ypres, the report says, chlorine was used, and while protection of the troops from it later became an easy matter, "it was only lack of faith in their new weapons that prevented the Germans from winning the war with it then and there."

"Had they brought into the fighting a sufficient supply of this chlorine," the report continues, "they might have gassed their way to Paris in short order. As it was, they brought to the line an almost negligible supply, and they themselves were insufficiently protected to go through their own gas, and follow up the attack. By the time they were able to renew gas warfare the French and British had equipped themselves with masks which were sufficient to protect men against chlorine."

The report tells of the development of gas masks from the original gauze pads, soaked in chemical to the "box respirator" which came into general use. The Americans and British employed a double-protection mask, the facepiece being gas tight, but, to insure against leaks, a mouthpiece and nose clip being supplied also, insuring protection even in a tight mask. The first order was for 1,100,000 of these masks for the American forces.

Subsequently, to provide greater comfort for the men, it was decided abroad that a single-protection mask would be sufficient; the risk of leaks being regarded as preferable to the discomfort of the double-protection type. When this decision was received, however, on this side, it was decided to carry forward experiment with new types of masks, which would give both comfort and security. This was carried forward to a point where a squad of 150 men in the field-testing section almost lived in their gas masks, working, playing baseball, digging trenches, fighting sham battles day and night in which actual gas grenades were employed, and exposing themselves to the heaviest concentrations of the deadly gases under all conditions.

Careful Tests.
"The work of this section," the report says, "even went so far in the case of the later designs as to include a test where six men worked, played, and slept in the masks for an entire week, only taking them off for 30 minutes at each meal time, and each day entering high concentration of the most deadly gases without injury to the wearers."

The chief ingredients of the protection against gases is carbon, which absorbs the gas instantaneously. Coconut shells formed the best supply of carbon that could be found, and the known world was raked by American representatives to secure what was needed. In addition enormous quantities of fruit pits and other nut shells were secured, and the national campaign to increase the supply of these ingredients met with great success. The slogan "Eat more coconut," the report states, increased the consumption in the country more than 100 per cent in a very brief period, and in October, 1918, the government was obtaining from all sources about 150 tons per day of coconut shells. The fruit canneries of the Pacific coast supplied 100 tons a day in apricot, peach, and cherry pits and walnut shells, and the campaign led by the American Red Cross to induce the public to contribute fruit pits and nut shells was in full swing when the armistice was signed. It is estimated that 4,000 tons of material was collected by this means.

Among the masks designed and produced were 871,881 horse masks, which were easier of manufacture, as a horse breathes always through his nose and is not as liable to gas poisoning as man. Other defensive equipment produced in large amounts included dingy blankets to seal the doors of underground shelters from gas, and oil clothing, underclothing, and gloves to protect from mustard oil. There were shipped also 45,000 special signal horns to give warning of gas and more than 50,000 fans to blow the vapor out of trenches and dugouts.

PIECES OF EIGHT

BEING THE AUTHENTIC NARRATIVE OF A TREASURE DISCOVERED IN THE BAHAMA ISLANDS IN THE YEAR 1905—NOW GIVEN TO THE PUBLIC

By Richard Le Gallienne

COPYRIGHT BY DAVID L. FINE & COMPANY

My language was more forcible than classical—had quite a piratical flavor, in fact; and my friend of "the wonderful works of God" looked up with a deprecating air. Its effect on George was nil, except perhaps to further deepen his sulks.

And this I did not do, after a while, that my remarks to George seemed to have set up a certain sympathetic acquaintance between him and my passenger, the shabby deckhand being apparently taken in as an humble third. They sat forward, talking together, and my passenger, read to them, on one occasion, from a piece of printed paper that fluttered in the wind.

The captain was occupied with his helm, and the thoughts he didn't seem to feel the necessity of sharing; a quiet, poised, probably stupid man, for whom I could not deny the respect we must always give to content, however simple. He was a sailor, and I don't know what better to say of a man.

So for companionship I was thrown back upon Tom. I felt, too, that he was my only friend on board, and a free—and the new ghost has got to go on sitting there, waiting for ever so long till someone else comes looking for it.

"But what has this sucking fish got to do with it?" And I pointed to the red membrane already drying in Tom's hand.

"Well, the man who carries this in his pocket won't be the next ghost," he answered.

"Take good care of it for me, then, Tom," I said, "and when it's properly dried let me have it. For I've a sort of idea I may have need of it after all."

And just then old Salter, the quietest member of the crew, put up his head into my hands, as though to say that he had been unfairly lost sight of.

"Yes, and you too, old chap—that's right. Tom and you and I."

And then I turned in for the night.

CHAPTER V.

In Which We Begin to Understand Our Unwelcome Passenger.

As I yawned and looked out of my cabin soon after dawn, about 4:30 next morning, there was no wind at all, and no hope of wind.

As I stood out of the cabin hatch, however, there was enough breeze to flutter a piece of paper that had been caught in the mainsail halyard; it fluttered there lonely in the morning. Nothing else was astir but it and I, and I took it up in my hand idly. As I did so George reared his head forward.

"Morning, George," I said; "I guess we've got to run on gasoline today."

"There ain't no gasoline, sir. It's run out in the night."

"The tanks were filled when we started, weren't they?" I asked.

"Yes, sir."

"We can't have used them up, so soon."

"No, sir—but someone has turned the cocks."

I stood dazed for a moment, wondering how this could have happened—then a thought slowly dawned upon me.

"Who has charge of them?" I said.

George looked a little stupid, then defiant.

"I see," I said; and, suddenly, without remembering Charlie Webster's advice not to lose your temper with a negro—I realized that this was no accident, but a deliberate trick, something indeed in the nature of a miniature mutiny. That fluttering paper I had picked from the halyard lay near my breakfast table. I had only half read it. Now its import came to me with full force. I had no firearms with me. Having a quick temper, I have made it a habit all my life never to carry a gun—because they go off so easily. But one most essential part of a gentleman's education had been mine, so I applied it instantly on George, with the result that a well-directed blow under the peak of the jaw sent him sprawling, and for awhile speechless, in the cockpit.

"No gasoline!" I said.

And then my passenger—I must give him credit for the courage—put up his head forward, and called out:

"I protest against that; it's a cowardly outrage. You wouldn't dare to do it to a white man."

"Oh, I see," I rejoined. "So you are the author of this precious paper here, are you? Come over here and talk it over, if you've the courage."

"I've got the courage," he answered, in a shaking voice.

"All right," I said; "you're safe for the present—and, George, who is so fond of sleep, will take quite a nap for a while, I think."

"You English brute!" he said, and the words had impelled me to invite him, after I cannot deny a certain admiration for him that had mysteriously grown up in me.

"Come here," I said, "for your life is safe for the time being. I would like to discuss this paper with you."

He came and we read it together, uttering as I had seen it flutter in his fingers as he read it forward, to the engine and to the deckhand. It began:

"Think how many we are! Think what we could do! It isn't either that we haven't intelligence—if only we were to use it. We don't lack leaders—we don't lack courage—we don't lack martyrs; all are ready."

I stopped reading.

"Why don't you start then?" I asked.

"We're waiting for Jamaica," he answered; "she's almost ready."

"It sounds a pretty good idea to me," I remarked, "from your point of view. From your point of view, remember, I said; but you mustn't think that yours is mine—not for one moment—O dear no! On the contrary, my point of view is that of the governor of Nassau, or his representative, quite nearby, at Harbour Island, isn't it?"

My pocket-marked friend grew a trifle green as I said this.

"We have sails still, remember," I resumed. "George and the lost gasoline are not everything. Five hours, with anything of a wind, would bring us to Harbour Island, and—with this paper in my hand it would be what do you think yourself? The gallows?"

My friend grew grave at that, and seemed to be thinking hard inside, making resolutions the full force of which I didn't understand till later, but the immediate result of which was a graciousness of manner which did not entirely deceive me.

"Oh," he said; "I don't think you

"Tom and You and I."

vague feeling had come over me that within the next few hours I might need a friend.

"Are we going too fast for fishing, Tom?" I asked.

"Not too fast for a barracouta," said Tom; so we put out lines and watched the stretched strings, and listened to the sea. After a while Tom's line grew taut, and we hauled in a five-foot barracouta.

"Look!" said Tom, as he pointed to a little writhing eel-like shape, about nine inches long, attached to the belly of the barracouta.

"A sucking fish!" said Tom. "That's good luck," and he proceeded to turn over the poor creature and cut from his back, immediately below his head, a flat inch and a half of skin flined and stamped like a rubber sole—the device, by which he led on to the belly of the barracouta much as the circle of wet leather holds the stone in a schoolboy's sling.

"Now," he said, when he had it clean and neat in his fingers, "we must hang this up and dry it in the northeast wind; the wind is just right—nor-nor-east—and there is no mackerel like it, specially when." Old Tom hesitated, with a shy innocent smile in his eyes.

"What is it, Tom?" I asked.

"Well, sir, I mean to say that this particular part of a sucking fish, properly dried in the northeast wind, is a wonderful mascot—when you're going after treasure."

"Who said I was going after treasure?" I asked.

"Aren't you, sir?" replied Tom, "asking your pardon."

"Let's talk it over later on, when you bring me my dinner, Tom."

Later, as Tom stood, serving my coffee, I took it up with him again.

"What was that you were saying about treasure, Tom?" I asked.

"Well, sir, what I meant was this: that going after treasure is a dangerous business."

"It's not only the living you're to think of—here Tom threw a careful eye forward."

"The crew, you mean?"

He nodded.

"But it's the dead too."

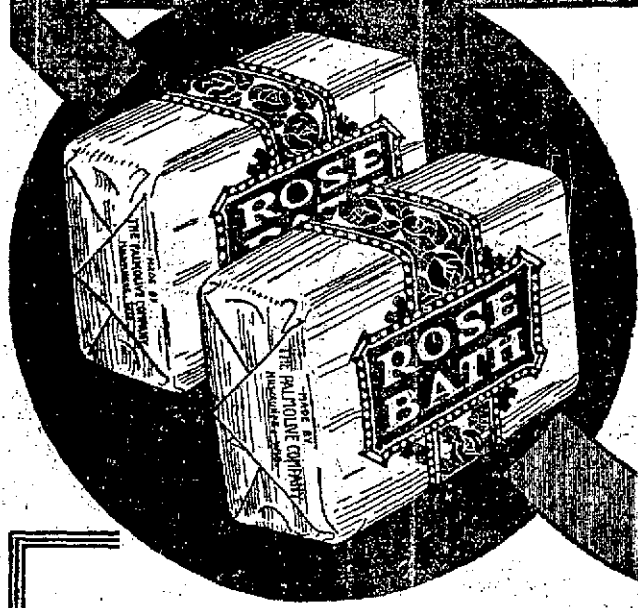

"The dead, Tom?"

"Well, sir, there was never a buried treasure yet that didn't claim its victim. Not one or two either. Six or eight of them, to my knowledge—and the treasure just where it was for all that. I don't say it sounds all foolishness, but it's true for all that. Something or other'll come, mark my word—just when they think they've got their hands on it: a hurricane or a tidal wave or an earthquake. And—well, the ghost laughs, but the treasure stays there all the time."

"The ghost laughs?" I asked.

"Oh! of course; didn't you know every treasure is guarded by a ghost? He's got to keep watch there till the next fellow comes along to relieve sentry duty, so to speak. He doesn't give it away. My no! He doesn't do that. But the minute someone else is killed, coming to dig for it, then he's quite mean that you're impulsive—when you hit that poor boy down there."

"Well," I observed, "I'm willing to treat you better than you deserve. So, I'll say nothing about this, if you like" (pointing to the manuscript), "and if the wind holds, put you ashore tomorrow at Spanish Wells. I like you in spite of myself. Is it a bargain?"

On this we parted, and as I thought, with a certain friendliness on both sides.

There was no sailing wind, so there was nothing to do but stay where we were all day. I spent most of the time in my cabin, reading a novel, and, soon after midnight, I fell asleep in a frame of mind unaccountably trustful.

I suppose that I had been asleep about three hours when I was disturbed by a tremendous roar. It was Salter (who always slept near me) out on the cockpit with a man under his paw—his jaws at the man's throat.

I called him off, and saw that it was my pocket-marked friend, with his right hand extended in the cockpit and a revolver a few inches away from it. So far as I knew it was the only firearm on the ship. "Let's get hold of that first, Salter," I said, and I slipped it into my hip pocket.

"Wake up, Tom," I called, and "wake up, captain!" Meanwhile, I took out the revolver from my hip pocket, and held it over the man. I seemed to grow more and more sorry for.

"We've not only got a mutiny about," I told the captain, "but we've got treason to the British government. Do you want to stand for that? Or shall I put you ashore with the rest?"

Unruffled as usual, he had nothing to say beyond:

"Ay, ay, sir."

"Take this cord, then," I ordered him and Tom, "and bind the hands and feet of this pocket-marked gentleman here; also of George, engineer; and also of Theodore, the deckhand. Bind them well. And throw them into the dingy, with a bottle of water apiece, and a loaf of bread. By noon we'll have some wind, and can make our way to Harbour Island, and there I'll have a little talk with the commandant."

And as I ordered, all was done. Tom and I rowed the dingy ashore, with our three captives bound like three silly fowls, and presently threw them ashore with precious little ceremony. Then we got back to the Maggie Darling, with impressions in our ears, and particularly the promises of the pocket-marked rebel, who announced the certainty of our meeting again.

AN INVITATION TO ECONOMY AND LOOK PRETTY

Here is one of the combination dresses that are so interesting from both an artistic and as economical standpoint—for who cannot imagine much cherished remnants into a frock of this sort. Navy Georgette printed in yellow was used for the blouse and there is a daisy of white Georgette to fill in the front. The skirt is of blue taffeta draped gracefully on one side and finished with a stripe of the same material.

It Was Salter—His Jaws at a Man's Throat.

HOUSE PASSES 750 MILLION RAILROAD BILL

Only Four Votes Against Measure to Finance Federal Operation.

NOW BEFORE THE SENATE

Director General Spends Enough Money to Maintain Standard but Rail Lines Have Deteriorated and Government Must Come Across, Told.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—With only a few dissenting votes the House passed and sent to the Senate late yesterday the bill authorizing $750,000,000 for use of the Railroad Administration in operating the government-controlled lines. The vote was 306 to 4. Predicting a possible loss of $650,000,000 to the government on railroad operation by the end of the year, Chairman Good of the House Appropriation committee, at the hearing on the bill, declared the Railroad Administration made a "grave error" in buying 100,000 freight cars and 2,900 locomotives without consulting the lines. The government stands to lose on the equipment, he said, and plans were forming to have the roads take it over under an equipment trust. Notwithstanding that the director-general had spent enough money to maintain equipment to standard, Chairman Good declared, it had deteriorated and the government would have to pay. "It must be understood," he said, "that this $750,000,000 will clear the government of all its debts."

WAS SURPRISED AT THE FINE RESULTS FROM PLANT JUICE

Jesse Ulom, No. 211, Hallman St., Tells How Plant Juice Cured His Wife.

That Plant Juice is repeating its success, is proven every day by the large number of local testimonials received from people in signed statements as to the benefits they have received from the use of this great remedy, like Mr. Jesse Ulom who lives at 211 Hallman St., Pittsburgh, and who is a chauffeur by occupation. He said:

"For three or four years my wife's health has been very poor. Her stomach was in a very weak condition so that she could scarcely keep any food in it. She had headaches, could not sleep at night and was very nervous and all run-down. She seemed to be growing worse and never improved until I got a bottle of Plant Juice for her, so it had been recommended to me very highly. From the first dose I noticed an improvement, and now since she has continued to take it for several weeks she keeps like a new woman. She can eat all kinds of food now and is always hungry for her meals. It has cured her nervousness and she is able to sleep the night through and feels rested when she gets up in the morning. Plant Juice is a fine medicine and we are glad to recommend it."

Plant Juice cleanses, strengthens and revitalizes the whole system; it clears the blood of poisons and impurities; puts the liver to work, regulates the bowels, strengthens the kidneys, and tones up the digestive organs. It sharpens the appetite and promotes sound, restful sleep. Plant Juice is sold in Connelville at Boy Hetzel's Drug Store.—Adv.

SENIOR CLASS PLAY, "WHAT'S IN A NAME?" TO BE STAGED TONIGHT

Patrons Will Probably Find It to be the Best That Has Yet Been Produced Here.

The second event of the high school commencement week will take place tonight when the senior class play, "What's in a Name?" will be presented at the auditorium. The dress rehearsal for the play was held last evening.

The class play is expected to go on record as one of the best ever produced in the school. It is a farce comedy written by Leona Hallymple, the author of "The Time of His Life," which was presented last year. The play will be given at 8:30 o'clock.

On Thursday night the class day exercises, "Every Senior," will be given. All members of the senior class will participate in this play and some excellent features have been worked out by the teachers in charge of it. The class night program is one of the most interesting events of commencement week.

Britton is expected to be here a day or two in advance.

on Friday with the commencement exercises. The address will be delivered by Dr. William M. Davidson, superintendent of the Pittsburgh schools. Miss Ruth Higbee, honor student, will deliver the valedictory, and Miss Hester McCarnes, who took second honors, will have an essay. Miss Ruth Miller, highest commercial student, will deliver the salutatory.

The class day exercises and the commencement program will both begin at 8:30 o'clock. All members of the graduating class have been given tickets for their friends and relatives which will be honored at the school until 8:15 o'clock. After that time the doors will be thrown open to the public. No charge is made on either night. The final examination of the lower classes are being finished up and all students will receive their final report cards on Friday.
